Eye Candy: Two Centuries of Chocolate Advertising

Vintage posters and lithographs from the late 19th and early 20th century illustrate advertising styles and imagery used by chocolate manufacturers around the world to promote their products to consumers. Sponsored by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund, and Michael Kovner and Jean Doyen de Montaignou.

Now through January 6, 2008

Contemporary and Cutting Edge: Pleasures of Collecting, Part III

The Bruce Museum's major fall/winter exhibition is the third in a series of exhibitions honoring local collectors. This exhibition gathers together some of the finest examples of modern and contemporary art residing locally including works by modern masters Louise Bourgeois, Roy Lichtenstein, Alex Katz, and Andy Warhol as well as the newly minted stars of the contemporary scene. The exhibition and its catalogue are generously underwritten by Lehman Brothers. The exhibition is also supported by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.

Now through February 24, 2008

A Taste for Chocolate

Ever wonder where your favorite chocolate comes from and how it is made? This exhibition traces the changing role of chocolate through history by detailing the natural history of cacao and exploring the different uses of chocolate from the time of the Mayan civilization to the present day. Hands-on activities help the visitor to understand the ways chocolate has been used by different cultures. Sponsored by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund, and Michael Kovner and Jean Doyen de Montaignou.

December 8, 2007 - March 23, 2008

Navajo Textiles from the Bruce Museum

The exhibition will explore an important period in the history of Navajo artistry as traditional methods of weaving were replaced by technological advances and the growth of a commercial interest in Navajo craft. Twelve stunning examples of pieces are on view that were created during the Transitional Period (1865-1895), when weaving was increasingly aimed at outside markets and production became focused on creating rugs rather than blankets. The exhibition is supported by the Theobald Foundation and the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.

January 26, 2008 - April 20, 2008

Robotics

This highly anticipated family-focused show is the Museum's major winter/spring offering. Robotics explores the impact of robots in science and technology and their place in the realm of popular culture. Through hands-on exhibitions and an array of real and imagined machines, visitors to the Museum will explore the world of robots from "Robbie the Robot" to nano-technology. The exhibition is supported by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund and a Committee of Honor.

March 8, 2008 - November 30, 2008

Phenomenal Weather

In this family-friendly interactive exploration of the weather, on display in the Science/Ethnology Gallery, visitors will be able to explore the science behind wind, rain, snow and extreme events like hurricanes. Touch a tornado and listen to the sounds it makes. Learn to be a sky watcher, forecasting the weather from cloud observations and scanning the skies for rainbows, halos and glories. Enjoy freaky weather factoids and examine the history of weather observations across cultures through artifacts and historical scientific instruments. The exhibition is supported by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.

June 28, 2008 - November 9, 2008

Climate Change: From Snowball Earth to Global Warming

The exhibition, on display in the Arcade Gallery, takes visitors on a journey through Earth's history of climatic changes. From 700 million years ago, when the Earth may have been almost completely covered in ice, to today's warming climate, examine the fossil and modern evidence for climatic variations. Learn how scientists mine ancient ice from Greenland's ice sheet and the Andes Mountains to reveal the history of greenhouse gases in our atmosphere. A self-contained living biosphere display demonstrates the complex interplay of water, air, earth and organisms to maintain the balance for sustaining life on Earth. Examine mounts, fossils and other specimens that illustrate the impact of climate change on the evolution of life. The exhibition is supported by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.

Reclaimed: Paintings from the Collection of Jacques Goudstikker

The Bruce Museum is assembling an exhibition of rarely seen Old Masters' work drawn from the collection of Jacques Goudstikker, who was the preeminent dealer of Old Master paintings in Amsterdam prior to World War II. Goudstikker, who was Jewish, fled The Netherlands by ship just ahead of the Nazi invasion in May 1940 with his wife, Desi, and their young son, Edo. Tragically, he died in an accident while on board. Goudstikker left behind more than 1,400 works of art that were looted by the Nazis. About 280 paintings from the Goudstikker collection were returned by the Allies to the Dutch authorities after the War, but rather than retribute the paintings to the family, as the Allies had expected, the Dutch authorities, over the family's protests, kept them in the Dutch national collection. In 1997, Marei von Saher, Goudstikker's daughter-in-law and sole living heir, began a protracted legal battle to recover the paintings, and in February 2006, the Dutch Government decided to return 200 works to her. Ms. von Saher, a Greenwich, CT, resident, then contacted Bruce Museum Executive Director Peter C. Sutton to seek his assistance in preparing an exhibition of the works being returned to the family. With the von Saher family, Dr. Sutton selected approximately thirty-five of the finest and most representative works for an international touring exhibition that will showcase the eye of Jacques Goudstikker and emphasize the importance of both the artworks and the historic restitution. It will have its world première at the Bruce Museum in May, 2008. In the fall of 2008, the exhibition is scheduled to travel to the art museum at Yad Vashem, the Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority in Jerusalem. The exhibition will then travel to The Jewish Museum in New York City, New York (March 14, 2009 - August 2, 2009). Other venues will be announced soon. The exhibition is supported by LexisNexis Group and the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.

Paris Portraits: Artists, Friends and Lovers

Perhaps at no other time and place was portraiture as rich in possibility as it appeared to be in early-twentieth-century Paris. This exhibition will present a fascinating array of both famous and rarely-seen works. Among the artists to be represented are Pablo Picasso, Henri Matisse, Pierre Bonnard, Marc Chagall, Constantin Brancusi, Marcel Duchamp, Alexander Calder, Foujita, Marie Laurencin, Jacques Lipchitz, Francis Picabia, Chana Orloff, Albert Gleizes, Amedeo Modigliani, André Derain, Juan Gris, Max Beckmann, Robert Delaunay, Alberto Giacometti, Diego Rivera, and Chaim Soutine. Although individual modern artists' portraits have formed the basis of excellent monographic exhibitions in the recent past, this exhibition is the first museum show to present the rich mosaic of Parisian art as a 'group portrait' of its leading practitioners. Painting and sculpture, as well as works on paper, will be featured. Kenneth E. Silver, Adjunct Curator, Bruce Museum, will curate the exhibition and author the catalogue. The exhibition is supported by the Charles M. and Deborah G. Royce Exhibition Fund.
